Sometimes, even if the Dll is properly registered, it still gets loaded with missing data. As a result, Windows either crashes or you see a screen like the one below. This error can be caused by a missing Dll. This error can also be caused by corrupted or incompatible registry entries. More often than not, the cause of this error is not known. However, there are some steps to follow that could help you find the cause of this error. Start with the logs. The error log will most likely give you the name of the file that is missing. You can also view the log in the Event Viewer on your computer. Another way to look for this error is to check the Windows registry. Below are a few steps to do that. Click Start and type regedit in the search field. In the registry window, go to the following key: HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\services\LanmanServer\Parameters Click on the left pane, and then on the 54b84cb42d
