Contact Jyothi Sales by calling on 9498926229 or sales@myjyothi.com A: It seems to me that you want to delete a record or modify a record by moving it to a different table. You can do this by using a self join. So for example, if TableA has a CompanyCode column and TableB has a CompanyCode column, you can join them together on CompanyCode. The join is likely to be on the CompanyCode column from TableA and CompanyCode from TableB, and the condition will be that where TableA.CompanyCode = TableB.CompanyCode. This means that you will have to repeat the condition in the where clause for each where clause in your update and delete. For example, if CompanyCode was the unique ID for Company, you might have something like this. delete from TableB where CompanyCode in (select TableA.CompanyCode from TableA where TableA.CompanyCode = TableB.CompanyCode) Note that if there are no records in TableA for CompanyCode = X, this query will return no rows. The key to any organization is to know its purpose.

Let  $k$  be an odd integer. We show that for each integer  $n$   $(k \mid n)$  implies that  $k$ -th power of  $n$  is even. Attempt : If  $k$  is odd, then  $(k \mid n)$  implies that  $n \equiv 0 \pmod{k}$ . Hence  $n^k \equiv 0 \pmod{k}$  and  $n^k$  is even. Is this proof correct? A: For a proof of this statement, there is an easier way to show this without using the fact that  $n \equiv 0 \pmod{k}$ . In the end, the reason the proof you wrote is correct is that if  $k$  is odd
