Below are a number of things all of you should check out at once: Newest API version is now available The new API version is now available. The new version is an alpha release. There are several changes that affect how the API works, so I'd like to stress that using the alpha release is not recommended. We have been working on an updater that would update to the next minor release of the API and SDK. The current alpha release is going to be the first minor release of the API. The v3 of the API has the most changes since v2. The new version is a major release and should be easier to migrate to. v3.0.4 v3.0.3 Migrated from PEGXML to NPM for building the SDK and using XmlRpc. to for building the and using for. The SDK now uses templates for server pages. Added the start_collection API to return a collection of all documents. API to return a collection of all documents. The response from delete_collection API now uses a XmlRpcResponse object. API now uses. The SDK will now sign all operations. This means you do not need to disable the server_signing option. You can now set the duration_unit option to a string instead of a number. You can now use a JsonPath expression instead of a XPath expression

Bollywood actor Abhishek Bachchan and TV presenter Kajol (above) have been at loggerheads for some time, and their recent spat over a film featuring Kajol's character in a questionable dress has landed them in the news. Bachchan took to Twitter to state that he has been targeted for many years. He said the "arrogant and intolerant stances" of those who throw his name in the mud, is part of the reason for his silence on the issue. He also took a dig at BJP leader Vijay Goel for stating that Bachchan was the "hero" of the film. He said, "Well said and tweeted by Vijay Goel. I am the hero of the film that Kajol was in, and I am the hero of the film that I am making now." Abhishek also took a dig at Goel and Karni Sena (a group of conservative Hindus) for their stance on the film. He said, "If any right-minded person doesn't see any problem in the design of the heroine in my film I am confident they won't understand the rancour and hate-filled tongues that have been talking about it!" Talking about an article published in a newspaper, in which he was called an 'Hinduphobe', Abhishek said, "The vile slander in a newspaper today and the reasons being given for it are as unthinkable and unacceptable as they are distasteful. It is almost like saying I have risen from being a practicing Hindu to one who converted to the Islamic faith. No, I am the one who has been a practicing Hindu all my life but, I have also practised my religion. And, for India to be called a Hindu Nation, we must allow everyone in it equal rights and facilities. No one can take away those rights and facilities from me and deny me access to the country." Bachchan was initially silent on the issue when the controversy broke out with Kajol's character in a questionable dress and Goel appearing to take sides in the matter. He then said that the 648931e174
